

Poems (Oneworld Classics)

A new translation of the poems by one of the greatest 20th-century Italian poets. The last light hesitates Between the folded fingers of the poplars The dark shivers with cold and expectation Behind us And slowly lays its arms around us To make us more lonely. After her tragic death in December 1938 at the early age of 26, Antonia Pozzi's poems, which she had been secretly writing for years, were brought to light and became the object of great critical attention, going through several editions in Italy and being translated into all the major European languages. Since then, her reputation has risen steadily, and she is now considered one of the greatest Italian poets of the 20th century. Acclaimed for the terseness and simplicity of her language, her poems show an acute power of observation and deep psychological introspection, revealing a mind akin to Emily Dickinsons and Sylvia Plaths, but also a unique and unmistakably original voice. This new version, with facing Italian text, perfectly renders the delicate undertones and that sense of longing which is such a distinctive feature of Pozzis poetry.
