

Making Up Megaboy

Most days he is Robbie Jones of Santa Rosita, California. Quiet, something of a loner, say his classmates at Kennedy Middle School. He liked to draw... volunteers his friend Ruben. Me and him made up stories all the time about a superhero called Megaboy. But one day, Robbie takes a .44 from his fathers sock drawer, climbs on the new bike hes been given for his thirteenth birthday, pedals a few blocks to Main Street, and shoots an elderly Korean shopkeeper. Within hours, Jae Lin Koh is dead. This extraordinary book, an album of inquiry as terse and visually arresting as any TV news brief, sets out the particulars of Robbies actions and arrest later that day. The boy, meek and shivering, confesses buy does not explain. Other people try: his parents, teachers, the cops, psychologists, the girl Robbie liked. The voices of America, beyond Megaboys help. Together, they will have young adults listening--and talking.
